- MHSPA membership is by publication, not by school or individual. When a publication joins, all student and adviser members of that publication are members of MHSPA for one year.
- You can join at any time, and your membership will last one full year from the date of payment.
- As a member, you and your staff will receive notification of all contests, conventions, workshops and deadlines.
- MHSPA is affiliated with the National Scholastic Press Association, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization housed at the University of Minnesota serving student media in secondary schools and journalism education programs across Minnesota.

BENEFITS OF MEMBERSHIP

One of MHSPA's goals is to provide students with the tools they need to become better journalists; educational programs taught by journalism experts are a way to meet that goal. The NSPA/MHSPA Summer Workshop at the University of Minnesota is an intensive residential program taught by top journalism educators and professionals from around the country. MHSPA's state high school journalism convention in the fall will be the first of many learning opportunities this year.

Our MHSPA blog (mhspa.studentpress.org) contains all the information you need about what's going on around the state. During the school year, the blog features happenings in Minnesota journalism, MHSPA events, contests and interviews with professional journalists. The Web site also has important information about scholarships, programs, contests and other opportunities you won't want to miss.

All Minnesota members of the National Scholastic Press Association are automatically members of MHSPA. What better way to get scholastic journalism really rocking in our state? Be sure to mark your NSPA membership status on the form to the left. Or join just MHSPA for only $39.

Visit our Web site at nspa.studentpress.org and select Forums. This area allows students and advisers to post and respond to messages for assistance or to share ideas. Connect with others from Minnesota or around the nation or world.

Also on the NSPA Web site is The Wheel, an ever-growing collection of resources we're sure you won't want to reinvent.

MHSPA provides recognition of outstanding publications and exceptional student work with a variety of awards. The end-of-year Gold Medallion awards for outstanding individual achievement in writing and design for newspaper, yearbook and magazine are presented each fall at the state convention as are convention Best of Show contests. In the spring, advisers can recognize their students with nominations for Distinguished Journalist, All-State Journalist or All-Minnesota Editor honor status. These opportunities are sponsored by MHSPA at no additional charge for MHSPA members.

Spring Write-offs will continue to present carry-in and on-the-spot competition opportunities for students in an array of visual and verbal categories. Spring is also when we announce the recipient of the Minnesota Journalism Educator of the Year, a way to recognize outstanding teacher/advisers in Minnesota.

So send in your form! Start today down the path of success and improvement by being part of an association of Minnesota student journalists. There's always something to learn, and you can have along the way.

Education, enrichment and recognition — you can get it all from MHSPA.
